

Country: Argentina
Committee: UNGA
Topic: Discussing How Climate Change Will Further Threaten International Peace and Security

Honourable Chair and Esteemed Delegates,

Argentina, a South American nation known for its diverse landscapes and rich cultural heritage, recognizes the pressing issue of climate change and its potential implications for international peace and security. As a country heavily dependent on agriculture and natural resources, Argentina has experienced the detrimental effects of climate change through extreme weather events, changing rainfall patterns, and agricultural disruptions. Throughout history, Argentina has endeavoured to address environmental challenges and remains committed to international cooperation in tackling climate change.

Climate change significantly affects Argentina's economy, environment, and social well-being. The agricultural sector, a crucial pillar of the economy, faces growing risks due to irregular weather patterns, droughts, and increased pests. Such events lead to crop failures, food insecurity, and economic instability, exacerbating poverty and social tensions. Additionally, the changing climate has intensified natural disasters, including floods and wildfires, causing substantial damage to infrastructure, human settlements, and ecosystems.

Proposal of Policies to Pass in a Resolution:

a) Establish an international climate adaptation fund to assist vulnerable countries in implementing measures to adapt to climate change.

b) Encourage the transfer of green technologies and knowledge sharing among nations to foster sustainable development.

c) Promote public-private partnerships to mobilise investments in renewable energy and sustainable infrastructure projects.

d) Enhance cooperation between countries in monitoring and managing transboundary environmental challenges.

Argentina firmly believes that global cooperation is vital in addressing the threats posed by climate change to international peace and security. Multilateral efforts are necessary to mobilise resources, share knowledge, and coordinate actions among nations to combat climate change collectively.

In conclusion, Argentina reiterates its commitment to addressing the challenges posed by climate change and their potential implications for international peace and security. By fostering international collaboration, implementing sustainable policies, and promoting green technologies, we can build a more resilient and secure future for all nations. Argentina stands ready to work with fellow member states to develop a comprehensive resolution that addresses the urgency of climate change and its impact on global peace and security.

Thank you!
