COUNTRY	RUSSIA
TOPIC	Protecting victims of human trafficking in conflict and post-conflict situations

The Russian Federation believes that one of the major problems in the modern world is the Human Trafficking. Each year 2.5 million people are trafficked, and the number is increasing every year. Russia has made considerable efforts in the past nineteen years to combat human trafficking, government and corporate involvement will illustrate Russia's commitment to creating a stable and lawful economic and financial base that will promote the country's economic goals while protecting its citizens from commercial based human trafficking, with primarily focus on the near conflict zones, For example- enforcing anti-trafficking cell near the Russian-Ukrainian border. The Russian Government is planning to create a national anti-trafficking cell for combating Human Trafficking. It is found in many reports that the majority of Human trafficking in Russia is commercial based, and the government is also primarily focusing on it. We have scaled up our work for stopping the Human Trafficking in else were world too, by giving funds to anti-trafficking and UN organisations in Syria and Afghanistan, working in conflict zones. The Russian Government demands for global action on preventing Human trafficking, primarily focused on conflict areas.
