G20

Russian Federation

Agenda: Discussing Ways to Promote Solidarity, Equality and Sustainability

I. Introduction

The Russian Federation firmly believes that the G20 must remain a platform for economic cooperation with shared growth and long-term stability. In a world which is facing economic uncertainty, inequality between nations and climate-related challenges- solidarity, equality, and sustainability should drive collective action rather than political division. These principles and solutions can only be achieved when countries respect and understand each other's economic conditions and development paths and ideas.

II. Existing Initiatives and Efforts

The Russian Federation has supported inclusive economic development and cooperation through multilateral and regional frameworks. Russia actively participates in the G20 development agenda, focusing on poverty reduction, infrastructure financing, and financial stability. Through platforms such as BRICS and the Eurasian Economic Union, Russia promotes trade facilitation and development financing without political conditions.

In the field of sustainability, Russia has invested in energy efficiency, responsible resource management and technological innovation, while advocating for a balanced and gradual energy transition that ensures energy security and affordability. Russia also supports coordinated global responses to economic crises, emphasizing the importance of stable supply chains and open markets.

III. Proposed Solutions

The Russian Federation proposes:

1. Strengthening Economic Solidarity through coordinated G20 responses to global crises and preventing fragmentation of global trade and financial systems.
2. Advancing Equality in Global Governance by reforming international and financial institutions to provide greater representation and decision-making power to emerging and developing economies.
3. Supporting Sustainable Development through realistic and flexible energy transition policies that respect national circumstances and economic capacities.

4. Ensuring fair and unrestricted access to development financing and technological resources for developing nations, without political preconditions, to address global inequality.

IV. Conclusion

The Russian Federation confirms its commitment to a cooperative, inclusive, and balanced global economic incentives. Solidarity must be based on cooperation, equality must be reflected in fair global governance and sustainability must support both environmental protection and economic growth. The G20 can achieve meaningful progress only by focusing on diplomacy, inclusivity and practical solutions that benefit all economies- developing and developing.
